

The Owl King Strix of England

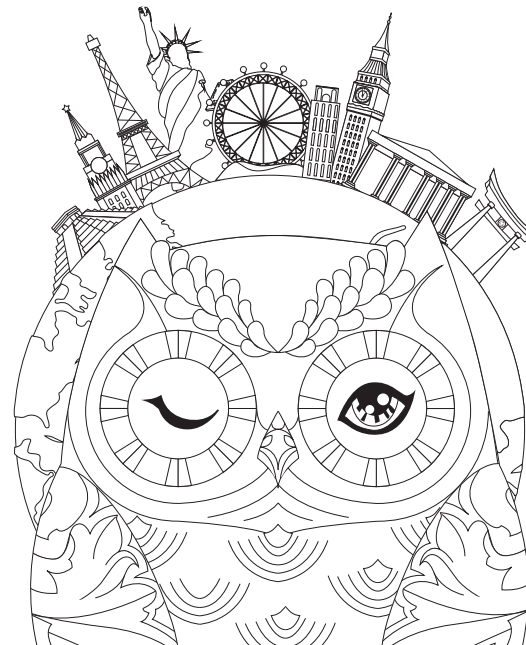

The London skies go grey with English clouds spreading across the city where Big Ben chimes hour on the hour. City lights go bright and the Eye rotates in the shadow of London Bridge where cars travel to places all day long. And to the west of the smoking chimneys sits 10 Downing Street where important decisions are made every moment, past the winding paths of Hyde Park where you see many of my fellow owls clustering in trees, asleep during the day and flying gallantly at night.

Welcome to London, I am King Strix, the Supreme Owl of Great Britain and I rule over the English skies and everything under them. I run my kingdom with valour and pride and for centuries my fathers and their fathers before them have protected the animals of our great land and from our perches at the top of Buckingham Palace, we hoot regularly and protect the country.
